

TRUMAN SLATED TO GIVE REPORT ON U. S. PLANS

Newspapers have blandly ignored the continuous stream of foreigners into the capital for the conference.

Lord Inverchapel, British ambassador, conferred for 30 minutes with acting secretary of state Dean Acheson this morning presumably in connection with the Greek situation.

Inverchapel, asked after the meeting whether Greece had been discussed, curtly answered the question by saying:

"You can use your heads."
He declined to be drawn out any further.

THE WHITE House would not say whether the President's views will be in the form of a statement or a message to congress, as has been stated by a number of sources on capitol hill.

The presidential statement, whatever form it takes, is expected to be a request to the congress to appropriate a large sum to come to the economic aid of Greece in an effort to prevent that country from falling into the hands of communists.

The President will confer with congressional leaders on foreign affairs and appropriations before making his statement.

It is not expected that the United States will go so far as to take over any actual military occupation of Greece from the British. The British government has been prodding the American government into doing just that, however.

JORDAN TO FACE CHARGE OF PAROLE VIOLATION

Sheriff Charles Radcliff disclosed Saturday that James Jordan, 30, Portsmouth, now in the Pickaway county jail under a burglary indictment, has signed a waiver of extradition and is awaiting arrival of officers to return him to Kentucky to face a charge of parole violation.

Just when Jordan will be removed to Kentucky is unknown the sheriff said. Jordan was apprehended several weeks ago at the T. Clemens, and was transferred to the jail in Circleville. He is charged with the burglary of the James D. Butts general store at Fox, which occurred last Sept. 5. Three men carried away a 500-pound safe containing $200. Walter L. Roberts, 29, and Wilbur Jeffords, 37, both of Portsmouth, were nabbed soon after the robbery and each is now serving one to 15 years in the Ohio Penitentiary.

'Strange Journey' At Cliftona

PAUL KELLY bluntly accuses Hillary Brooke of a double deal in the excitement-packed new adventure thriller, "Strange Journey," which opens Sunday at the Cliftona theatre, while Lee Patrick, Bruce Lester and Osa Massen look on in shocked amazement. Groucho, Harpo and Chico in "A Night In Casablanca," add amusement to the double feature program Sunday and Monday at the Cliftona theatre.

'Margie' Coming Sunday

"MY SWEET EMBRACEABLE YOU" would be an apt theme song for lovely Jeanne Crain and handsome Glenn Langan in this romantic scene from the technicolor comedy-drama, "Margie," which comes Sunday to the Grand theatre. In the film Jeanne plays a dual role—first as a sixteen-year-old high school girl, then as a mother of a fourteen-year-old daughter. Langan appears as a high school French teacher with whom Jeanne falls madly in love. The film's poignant and hilarious story is set against the background of the frivolous twenties, and reveals the rollicking antics and innocent escapades of teen-agers in a Midwestern city during those hey-hey days.

was certain to follow Mr. Truman's message in the senate. One estimate was that of the full credit to Greece about 100 million dollars would be represented in military material. War and state department authorities were described as uncertain whether this amount could be provided from surplus U. S. stocks in Germany.

Taber said he planned to have former president Herbert Hoover testify before the house appropriations committee soon. He indicated that Hoover's recommendations and opinions on needs overseas were part of the "picture" he wished to have before proceeding on the budget.

COLUMBUS MAN IS INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Harry Reeves, 29, of 276 West Broad street, Columbus, suffered a left shoulder fracture and lesser injuries at 4:10 p. m. Friday in an automobile crash on U. S. Route 23, four miles north of Circleville. A passing motorist removed Reeves to Berger hospital and after receiving first aid he was removed to his home.

State Highway Patrolman C. E. Wells reported that Reeves was a passenger in a car driven south by Paul Kingry, 56, Columbus, which was trailing a south-bound machine operated by Ernest Oldaker, 43, Route 3, Circleville. Patrolman Wells said the collision occurred when Oldaker attempted to execute a left turn and that both cars were badly damaged but that Kingry and Oldaker escaped injury.

Forest H. Kneec, 22, Laurelville, arrested at 1:30 a. m. Saturday on South Court street by Patrolmen Turney Ross and Alva Shasteen, on a charge of reckless driving, was released under $20 bond for appearance at 8 p. m. Saturday in the court of Mayor Ben. H. Gordon.

Jesus Washes the Disciples' Feet

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for March 9 is John 13, the Memory Verse being John 13:34, "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; even as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.")

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

THE ENTIRE action of this lesson takes place in an upper room in a house in Jerusalem. Jesus and His disciples came to this room to take supper together on Thursday of Passion week.

Before they entered the room the disciples had been contending as to who would have the highest place in the kingdom of Christ, and they were, according to a sermon of the late Dr. J. D. Jones, angry with one another. The custom of washing the feet before meat was a slave's duty, but where there was no slave, the disciples themselves performed this office for one another. None would do it, however, so the Master, Jesus Himself, "laid aside His garments and took a towel, and girded Himself."

He poured water into a basin, and began to wash the disciples' feet, drying them on the towel. When He came to Simon Peter, the latter said, "Lord, dost Thou wash my feet? Jesus answered and said unto him, What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter."

"Peter said unto Him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with Me." Ashamed, Peter answered, "Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head."

Jesus said, "He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit: and ye are clean, but not all. For He knew who would betray Him; therefore said He, Ye are not all clean."

Jesus Chides Them
After He had washed their feet and all were seated, Jesus reprimanded them in His own gentle way: "Ye call Me Master, and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am."

"If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet: ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you."

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

Many people, old and young, today, think certain tasks are "beneath" them, their tasks are

"menial" tasks. If Jesus was not too great to do such a task as this, should we not be ashamed to feel that any task is too lowly for us to do?

Jesus knew well who it was of His intimate friends who would betray Him, but apparently none of the others suspected Judas, even after the following incident took place. Jesus said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, that one of you shall betray Me," and He was troubled in spirit. Now John, whom Jesus loved, was leaning on the Master's bosom, and as the disciples looked at one another, wondering which of them Jesus meant, Simon Peter beckoned to John and told him to ask Jesus who it was that should betray Him.

Jesus answered John by saying, "He it is, to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped it." So Jesus dipped the sop and gave it to Judas. Satan entered into Judas then, John tells us, and Jesus said to him, "That thou doest, do quickly."

No man at the table guessed, even after what Jesus had done and said, that Judas was the betrayer. Some of them thought that because Judas had the bag containing all their money, that Jesus had told him to buy things of which they had need for the feast of the passover, or to give something to the poor. Judas accepted the sop and went out into the night.

Tried to Make Them Realize
Once again Jesus tried to make His disciples understand that His time had come, and that He would be with them a very short time. He said, "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek Me; and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say unto you."

"A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another."

"By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye have love one to another." Simon Peter asked Him, "Lord, whither goest Thou?" And Jesus answered, "Whither I go, thou canst not follow Me now; but thou shalt follow Me afterwards."

Said Peter, "Lord, why cannot I follow Thee now? I will lay down my life for Thy sake."

Jesus, knowing Peter, said, "Wilt thou lay down thy life for My sake? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, The cock shall not crow, till thou has denied Me thrice."

Thus ends today's lesson. How much Jesus loved these men who had shared His work and witnessed His acts of goodness!

The gates to Brook Green Gardens, in the South, open up a vista of such gorgeous beauty as to suggest paradise itself. Imagination can conjure up no more heavenly serenity than that of this scene.

Every man is striving to attain the same goal in life—immortality. Some strive more diligently than others. Some take the wide road, a smaller number the narrow one. What is the key that will open the gates to paradise? Our churches and Sunday schools teach us that first we must "seek the kingdom of God and His Righteousness."

To seek God and to give our selves unto Him will open the gates to an earthly paradise that will enable us truly to achieve the "peace that passeth understanding." A joyous and serviceable life and assurance of paradise in life hereafter is not an idle dream. It is attainable by man. Many have achieved this state.

Frequently it is necessary to consult the spiritual guidance of one of God's ministers to find the solution to problems that may seem overpowering. Prayer and regular Bible reading are steps in the right direction.

Paradise in this world comes to men who have sought and found God and have the faith to do His will, walking humbly in the performance of their daily tasks. To achieve such a paradise here, is to assure it through the countless ages ahead.

Fourth in the series of Wednesday evening Lenten services will be conducted this week, the program starting at 7:30.

The Gates To Paradise

Jesus Washes the Disciples' Feet

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for March 9 is John 13, the Memory Verse being John 13:34, "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; even as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.")

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
THE ENTIRE action of this lesson takes place in an upper room in a house in Jerusalem. Jesus and His disciples came to this room to take supper together on Thursday of Passion week.

Before they entered the room the disciples had been contending as to who would have the highest place in the kingdom of Christ, and they were, according to a sermon of the late Dr. J. D. Jones, angry with one another. The custom of washing the feet before meat was a slave's duty, but where there was no slave, the disciples themselves performed this office for one another. None would do it, however, so the Master, Jesus Himself, "laid aside His garments and took a towel, and girded Himself."

He poured water into a basin, and began to wash the disciples' feet, drying them on the towel. When He came to Simon Peter, the latter said, "Lord, dost Thou wash my feet? Jesus answered and said unto him, 'What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.'"

"Peter said unto Him, 'Thou shalt never wash my feet.' Jesus answered him, 'If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with Me.' Ashamed, Peter answered, 'Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head.'"

Jesus said, "He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit; and ye are clean, but not all. For He knew who would betray Him; therefore said He, 'Ye are not all clean.'"

Jesus Chides Them
After He had washed their feet and all were seated, Jesus reprimanded them in His own gentle way: "Ye call Me Master, and Lord; and ye say well; for so I am."

"If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you."

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

Many people, old and young, today, think certain tasks are "beneath" them, they call them

"menial" tasks. If Jesus was not too great to do such a task as this, should we not be ashamed to feel that any task is too lowly for us to do?

Jesus knew well who it was of His intimate friends who would betray Him, but apparently none of the others suspected Judas, even after the following incident took place. Jesus said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, that one of you shall betray Me," and He was troubled in spirit. Now John, whom Jesus loved, was leaning on the Master's bosom, and as the disciples looked at one another, wondering which of them Jesus meant, Simon Peter beckoned to John and told him to ask Jesus who it was that should betray Him.

Jesus answered John by saying, "He it is, to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped it." So saying Jesus dipped the sop and gave it to Judas. Satan entered into Judas then, John tells us, and Jesus said to him, "That thou doest, do quickly."

No man at the table guessed, even after what Jesus had done and said, that Judas was the betrayer. Some of them thought that because Judas had the bag containing all their money, that Jesus had told him to buy things of which they had need for the feast of the passover, or to give something to the poor. Judas accepted the sop and went out into the night.

Tried to Make Them Realize
Once again Jesus tried to make His disciples understand that His time had come, and that He would be with them a very short time. He said, "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek Me; and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say unto you."

"A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another."

"By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye have love one to another."

Simon Peter asked Him, "Lord, whither goest Thou?" And Jesus answered, "Whither I go, thou canst not follow Me now; but thou shalt follow Me afterwards."

Said Peter, "Lord, why cannot I follow Thee now? I will lay down my life for Thy sake."

Jesus, knowing Peter, said, "Wilt thou lay down thy life for My sake? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, The cock shall not crow, till thou has denied Me thrice."

Thus ends today's lesson. How much Jesus loved these men who had shared His work and witnessed His acts of goodness!

The gates to Brook Green Gardens, in the South, open up a vista of such gorgeous beauty as to suggest paradise itself. Imagination can conjure up no more heavenly serenity than that of this scene.

Every man is striving to attain the same goal in life—immortality. Some strive more diligently than others. Some take the wide road, a smaller number the narrow one. What is the key that will open the gates to paradise? Our churches and Sunday schools teach us that first we must "seek the kingdom of God and His Righteousness."

To seek God and to give ourselves unto Him will open the gates to an earthly paradise that will enable us truly to achieve the "peace that passeth understanding." A joyous and serviceable life and assurance of paradise in life hereafter is not an idle dream. It is attainable by man. Many have achieved this state.

Frequently it is necessary to consult the spiritual guidance of one of God's ministers to find the solution to problems that may seem overpowering. Prayer and regular Bible reading are steps in the right direction.

Paradise in this world comes to men who have sought and found God and have the faith to do His will, walking humbly in the performance of their daily tasks. To achieve such a paradise here, is to assure it through the countless ages ahead.

OLD NAMES DISAPPEARING

SOME FINE old names are disappearing from the map. Towns along the Dalmatian coast which bore Venetian names now see them replaced by Yugoslav equivalents, to emphasize the change in rule. Spalato, noted for its palace of the Roman emperor Diocletian, now gets the far uglier name of Split.

A large gap is left by the abolition of the old name Ragusa. Founded in the 3d century, Ragusa was long a link between Slavic and Italian civilizations. It managed to keep its independence, even when the Turks had overthrown Ragusa's far stronger neighbors, the Byzantine empire and the kingdom of Serbia. From Ragusan merchant ships the English language gets the name "argosy", once spelled "ragusy", applied to a large boat carrying rich freight. Now Ragusa is to be renamed from the neighboring Slavic settlement of Dubrovnik.

This emphasis on the importance of having a city's name come from the language of its new rulers surprises Americans, who change town names seldom. Our most drastic alteration was the comparatively recent decision to restore an "h" to the city once known as Pittsburgh and earlier still as Pittsburgh.

CHANGES IN EMPIRE

ENGLAND is giving up India and Burma, and some time ago granted independence to Egypt. There has been nothing like this since the gradual downfall of the Roman empire, when little by little the soldiers were withdrawn from one province, then another. First Dacia, corresponding roughly to the modern Hungary, later Britain, then the outlying parts of the present-day France. It must have made gloomy hearing to the Romans of that day, and plenty of Englishmen will feel the same about today's withdrawals.

There is one great difference, however. The Roman provinces, when abandoned, went their own way, and interested themselves no more in the fate of the mother city. But India and Burma are likely to feel that a tie still binds them to Great Britain, even if it has become much looser. Canada, Australia and the other dominions are linked to the mother country only in name, yet this shadowy but voluntary connection is a more powerful bond than a union enforced by soldiers.

By the calendar, if not by the weather, spring is not far ahead. The panting you hear comes from the aged cars which are giving thanks.

An unfortunate campaigner once promised two cars in every garage. One, if a new one, now seems the height of luxury.

Russia disclaims expansionism, but gosh, how she hollers if anybody questions her right to anything she wants.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, March 8—The Moscow conference of foreign ministers opening Monday is expected to follow the usual routine. After six weeks of torrent haranguing, the big four will agree on nothing and designate their deputies to determine what form nothing shall take. Announcement will be made agreement has been reached on fundamentals, but fundamentally the agreement will concern only superficialities. This is what officials think.

In all other particulars, the meeting approximates one which might be held in an icehouse in Antarctica before the Spring thaw. Mr. Byrnes, the former state secretary, had advised Russia he would take a delegation of 60 but General Marshall decided, when he came into office, he would need 100. Russia was advised of this. But Marshall's final list was chopped 16 to a total of 84, presumably on the urgings of Russia, and our ambassador there, Bedell Smith, who constantly prodded Marshall about hotel accommodations being unavailable. While Russia is quite willing and planning to take over management of the entire world, she had not been able to produce in 30 years of revolution enough hotel rooms in her own capital to house a respectably sized council of ministers.

The newspaper predicament was equally revealing. The press arrangers here had been told repeatedly that after Moscow swept out its two hotels, and gave one of its colossal structures to the press, it could not house many. The arrangers cut the press list to 52, and conceded themselves to be quite slick in their slashing. For one thing they put the New York Daily Worker No. 35 on the list, believing Moscow would never keep its own paper out, and thus we would get at least 35 correspondents in. We got only 15 to 20 according to late accounts, later changed by Ambassador Smith to exactly 36. The accounts are not trustworthy because Moscow was supposed to furnish visas for a press delegation of surely 20 and told us so, but when some of the men applied for their visas at the Russian embassy, nothing had been heard of the matter. State department authorities confessed a few days before Marshall left they did not know how many of our men would get in.

And mind you the press delegation did not only include reporters but one still cameraman who was to take all pictures as a pool man for all the outside world, a movie man who could not get along without an accompanying engineer although his product was similarly to be pooled, and two radio men to supplement some American radio representatives now there. The remaining reporters were not to be UN or Washington experts, but mostly British, French and other representatives of American newspapers already on the job in Europe.

Never in all history of major international conferring has there been such a conference. The Russians would not answer inquiries. Promised visas would not show up as promised, needed delegates and good reporters alike were kept out. To a large extent, we went into the meeting flying blind on one motor.

Now there was just a little too much of all this to allow anyone to expect great things in Moscow, especially in view of semi-official subterranean reports to the contrary. One such recent report, not viewed outside the few top officials, has said Russia is absolutely convinced collapses will come in Britain and the United States within the next 18 months and will follow an undeviating policy against any agreements

"Radio poll, Mr. Glotz. What program are we listenin' to?"

DIET AND HEALTH

Premature Infant

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THE mother of a premature baby is always anxious to know what chance her child has to live and whether it can grow into a normal, healthy baby if it does. These are things which cannot always be told her at once because certain abnormal conditions may be present which will only show up later on. By and large, however, the most important factor in determining whether a premature baby will survive is its birth weight. This, together with the type of care the baby gets during the first few months of life, and especially the first few days, usually tells the story.

Other things too, in particular cases, may turn the scale toward life or death. Thus, the nearer the baby is to full term, the better its chance for life. The absence of disease, particularly in the mother, and an uncomplicated birth are also important.

Dr. Ralph M. Tyson of Philadelphia has made a 15-year study of premature births in many thousands of cases. He found the chief causes to be multiple births, that is, twins or triplets, toxemia or poisoning of pregnancy, certain abnormalities of the womb, illness in the mother and, in some cases, syphilis. For some unknown reason premature babies born of mothers over 30 years of age have less chance of surviving than those born to younger women. During one year all mothers coming under Dr. Tyson's observation were given diets containing large amounts of vitamins and minerals. The number of premature babies born continued about the same as in other years but even so, the number of those weighing more than four pounds increased. This is most important because, as I have said, the more a baby weighs at birth, the easier it is to save it. The greatest danger was for infants born by breech, that is, with the buttocks first instead of the head.

The feeding of premature babies is important and, of course, the best milk for them is breast milk. These infants must also be safeguarded against infection and given enough fluid. The body temperature must be constantly kept up to normal by use of an incubator or heated bed. The humidity or moisture in the air must be kept high enough in order to protect the babies.

Expert nursing care by a nurse specially trained in handling premature infants also markedly increases the chances of the baby for survival. The giving of oxygen may help to tide the infant over a critical period. These babies do best when cared for in a hospital equipped with all the necessary things such as oxygen, incubators, and well-trained nurses who thoroughly understand the case of premature babies.

CHAPTER ONE

THE DAY was dull and cold, with a threat of snow in the air, and there was already a wrinkled gray blanket of snow and frozen slush underfoot. A fierce wind swooped down Michigan Avenue between rows of tall buildings, making pedestrians clutch their coats about them and hunch their heads, turtle-wise, into upturned collars.

But the girl who alighted from a bus at a northside corner didn't clutch her tailored brown coat about her, or huddle into its collar, either. She walked fast and free around the corner and eastward, quiet expectancy lighting her young face beneath a squarely set brown beret. There was wisdom in her choice of color, since she herself was a subtle blend of autumn shades. Russet-gold hair in a long bob was wind swept now into a riotous, yet becoming disorder. Hazel eyes shaded from green to golden amber under wide-spaced brows. Her skin was a warm, glowing tan.

She turned into the recessed entry of an impressive apartment building, struggled with the wind a moment for possession of the heavy door and entered. The lobby was warm and spacious and the girl's heels made a brittle sound on the marble floor as she crossed to the elevators with the directness of complete familiarity.

She addressed the wizened old operator a shade anxiously as she stepped into the car. "Hello, Dan. Is my mother home yet?"

The man shook his head. "Don't believe so, Miss Sherry. But your sister went up a while ago."

"Well, that's something," Sherry Kent frowned a little as the car lifted. "It's after two o'clock, though. We'll never make the early train."

"Goin' to the country?" the old man asked with inoffensive interest. "That farm place you like so well?"

Sherry nodded. "Yes, for the weekend."

Anticipation welled up anew in her, thinking of Steve Jeffrey's farm. All morning long, while she trailed from one small exclusive shop to another with Angie Pemberton on one of Angie's interminable shopping forays and afterwards during lunch at the Buttery, the prospect of the weekend ahead had figured largely and pleasantly in Sherry's thoughts. Angie had been furious over being hurried so. And now to get home and find that her mother was late—something important, Sherry supposed, had come up at the store to delay her. Although Leda had been content she could get away early this Saturday, and Steve would be driving in to Brundage to meet them. Sherry bit her lip in futile annoyance.

"Have a good time." Old Dan's voice penetrated her absorption as he parted the elevator doors at her floor.

"Thanks, I will." She gave him her wide, warm smile and the old man basked in its friendliness until she turned away. He watched her hurry off down the deeply carpeted hall, noting the fluid grace in the rhythm of her long, lovely legs, the easy carriage of her slim body. He thought: "Prettiest girl in the buildin'—yeah, an' the nicest, too. Worth a dozen of that smooty sister of her'n. Or their mother, either—her an' her airs!"

Sherry let herself into the small, perfectly appointed foyer of the apartment, with its fuchsia walls and bone-white accents. There was a bench upholstered in fuchsia-and-white striped satin, a scroll-framed mirror above a matching white console.

"Sherry, is that you?" her sister's voice called.

Sherry went through the arched doorway into the large, light living room, the wide picture-window of which looked eastward toward the lake. It was a smart and beautiful room, all pale woods and subtle colors augmenting each other in the modern manner. Its only flaw was a certain decorator-coldness that made it seem more a tasteful furniture display in a shop window than a background against which people moved and lived.

And Valerie Kent, curled up bonelessly on the divan, might well have been a mannequin designed to augment such a display. She made an arresting picture in a coral jersey robe that clung like another skin. Her feet were bare, the nails coral-lacquered. The pale cloud of her ashen-blond hair was brushed back plain and shining from her lovely, disdainful face. But Sherry was accustomed to her sister's dramatic glamour. The thing that bothered her was the obvious fact that Val was just out of the shower and lighting a cigarette as calmly as though time stood still.

"For heaven's sake!" Sherry exclaimed disgustedly. "Why aren't you dressed? And where's Mother? We'll never make the three-thirty train."

Val's eyes, amazingly dark in contrast to the creamy pallor of her skin, rested on her sister with tolerant amusement. "Calm down, pet. We have all the time in the world. We're not going."

Sherry, who had shrugged out of her coat, stared at her sister in blank dismay. "Not going?"

"That's right," Val stretched back gracefully as a cat and ex-

haled smoke through her nostrils in a dissolving cloud.

"But—Steve expects us. Mother told him definitely we'd be there. It's all settled."

"Not any more it isn't," Val corrected calmly. "It all began to fall apart an hour ago. Wade phoned—I'm having dinner with him." She smiled faintly. "You wouldn't expect me to pass Wade up for a weekend at Steve's stupid old place, would you?"

"But Mother and I—" Sherry began, her candid young face bleak with disappointment.

"Mother," Val broke in, "phoned from the store just a little while ago. She thinks the weather's too foul to chase away out to Brundage—especially since it happens Roger Bedloe's invited her to dinner. So, she simply phoned Steve and explained we couldn't make it this weekend."

"Damn it!" Sherry said bitterly. "We haven't gone out to the farm in months! Something like this always comes up. I can't think when I've seen Steve. I've been looking forward to the week-end now."

Aburdly, she felt like crying. Only, of course, she didn't cry—not with Val sitting there regarding her with that look of amused superiority. Sometimes Sherry came close to disliking her sister—and sometimes she felt dreadfully sorry for her. It was only necessary to remember how Val had changed in the past year, to remind oneself that she didn't mind hurting others because she had been so grievously hurt herself. Heartbreak wears many faces.

Val masked hers with arrogant detachment, while she ran pell-mell after pleasure. But all the time, Sherry knew, she was wound up inside like a tight spring and despair walked with her. There was no calm within her, nor even the beginnings of peace. She was driven and harried by the past, by the memory of a laughing face under a shock of unruly blond hair—Rick Colby's face. Rick, whose epitaph was a War Department telegram breaking the news that he was missing in action. Only gaily gave Val moments of forgetfulness. And there were so many other moments, times when she was moody and bitter, stinging sarcasm—times when Sherry heard her weeping in the night, or woke to see her standing, still as a statue in the moonlight, staring out the window at nothing.

"There'll be other weekends," Val said wearily. "You can get a date for tonight. Joel Pemberton is always more than willing."

"I don't want a date with Joel," Val shrugged. "What you see in that dull old place of Steve's anyway?" She left it at that and reached out to turn on the radio.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, March 8

MOST propitious auguries await those whose past efforts, meritorious work, fidelity and loyalty in regard to duty, responsibility and obligations, may feel justified to make the occasion one of festivity and celebration, with all manner of social, domestic and romantic diversions and indulgences. In the latter it might be wise to keep within bounds, since excess of any kind might precipitate disagreeable situations.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a happy, productive and prosperous year, with much in the way of recognition of merit, hard work, efficiency and a sense of duty, responsibilities and obligations coming up for solid rewards and tokens of esteem and appreciation. Such may take the form of promotion, financial increase, and social, professional and romantic activities, with celebrations and various engagements. It is possible that some sort of irregularity, excess or subtle connection might beget regrets or cast opprobrium on a fair reputation. Shun all possibilities of illicit or scandalous denouements.

A child born on this day is bounteously equipped for a successful and happy career, with distinction, honors and rewards of merit. It might be easily duped by tricksters or strange intrigues.

For Sunday, March 9

SUNDAY's horoscope holds omen of a sudden and spectacular visitation coming "from the blue" with breath-taking and drastic force, at once uprooting, radical, and devastating. It is impossible to tell the nature of this "atomic bomb" since it affects with revolutionary force the personal, romantic and business life. While this spading up is disintegrating, it is not without its compensations, since the smash may make way for rebuilding on firmer, more wholesome and acceptable foundations. Work to this end.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of a dramatic, unprecedented and unpredictable course of events, in which all the fastness of life—personal, social, romantic, financial and business—are under prospect of a complete and devastating uprooting. Radical and drastic relations, ties and interests are involved and with sensational denouement. But simultaneously there is spectacular advantage to be grasped by a brilliant coup or exceptional opportunities for rebuilding on the ruins a firm, improved and progressive structure, a dramatic, honorable and adventurous career. Look for publicity or public acclaim or emoluments, romantic adventure.

A child born on this day will have a group of original or unique talents and abilities, with ideas and inspiration fitting it for a romantic and adventurous

WASHINGTON—President Truman will move cautiously in asking Congress for a universal military service law.

The president has been advised, and is believed to concede privately that the bill would not pass Congress now. Its future, from the administration's viewpoint, is only slightly brighter.

Before trying for peace-time training, the president will await action on his Army-Navy merger plan. After that fight, he still will face widespread hostility to compulsory training in peace-time, especially from Republicans.

Only a handful of Republicans could be counted on to support peace-time training now—or at any future time unless there is some unexpected turn in world affairs.

He does have, of course, the support of Chairman Chan Gurney (R), of South Dakota, of the Senate armed services committee, and Rep. Walter G. Andrews (R) of New York who heads the House committee. They might put in universal bills even before the president moves in the matter.

But among other Republicans, the cry of "regimentation" would be heard, and they will contend emphatically that the traditional American voluntary-enlistment plan is successful for getting peace-time military and naval personnel.

GOP PARTY-LINERS HAVE TABBED Massachusetts' two Republican senators, Lodge and Saltonstall, as dark horses for the 1948 presidential race if current favorites get in trouble before they hit the home stretch.

Oddly enough, the two are blue-blooded Boston Brahmins who won their spurs the hard way—and in the Democratic stronghold of Boston where Back Bay socialites usually get the jaundiced eye, politically.

Saltonstall got his Senate seat after his efficient, businesslike administration as governor dissipated his opposition. In the nation's Senate, Saltonstall has been modestly quiet—but has not hesitated to speak out at times against his party leaders, and even to join the "young Turks" on some votes.

Lodge, who gave up his Senate seat, went to war, came back and regained his senatorship by defeating the veteran Democrat, Senator Walsh, likewise steps out of the leadership's traces at times.

He did that on the David E. Lilienthal appointment—in the face of vigorous opposition to Lilienthal by GOP Policy Chairman Robert A. Taft (R) of Ohio, Lodge announced his support of the former TVA chief.

Serving notice that of his alignment with the "liberal" faction of his party, Lodge once told his more conservative colleagues: "We are not put in office to put the clock back but to wind it up, get the rats' nests out of the gears and get it going again."

THE GENERAL PUBLIC hasn't heard much about it yet, but the next shortage it will be worrying about will be of copper. Government and business experts say it is likely to slow production of innumerable consumer items.

The Office of Temporary Controls figures there will be a 25 per cent deficit in the copper supply this year. The most the country can hope for, its economists say, is 1,440,000 tons. Demand will exceed that by at least 350,000 tons, and perhaps more.

They are putting forth the proposal that the four cents a pound import duty on copper be dropped, at least temporarily, and one bill calling for that step has been introduced in Congress.

Although it has government and business experts' support, the measure will hit trouble on Capitol Hill, with a well organized bloc of western legislators ready to fight any move toward dropping the bars to copper.

OLD NAMES DISAPPEARING

SOME FINE old names are disappearing from the map. Towns along the Dalmatian coast which bore Venetian names now see them replaced by Yugoslav equivalents, to emphasize the change in rule. Spalato, noted for its palace of the Roman emperor Diocletian, now gets the far uglier name of Split.

A large gap is left by the abolition of the old name Ragusa. Founded in the 3d century, Ragusa was long a link between Slavic and Italian civilizations. It managed to keep its independence, even when the Turks had overthrown Ragusa's far stronger neighbors, the Byzantine empire and the kingdom of Serbia. From Ragusan merchant ships the English language gets the name "argosy", once spelled "ragusy", applied to a large boat carrying rich freight. Now Ragusa is to be renamed from the neighboring Slavic settlement of Dubrovnik.

This emphasis on the importance of having a city's name come from the language of its new rulers surprises Americans, who change town names seldom. Our most drastic alteration was the comparatively recent decision to restore an "h" to the city once known as Pittsburgh and earlier still as Pittsburg.

CHANGES IN EMPIRE

ENGLAND is giving up India and Burma, and some time ago granted independence to Egypt. There has been nothing like this since the gradual downfall of the Roman empire, when little by little the soldiers were withdrawn from one province, then another. First Dacia, corresponding roughly to the modern Hungary, later Britain, then the outlying parts of the present-day France. It must have made gloomy hearing to the Romans of that day, and plenty of Englishmen will feel the same about today's withdrawals.

There is one great difference, however. The Roman provinces, when abandoned, went their own way, and interested themselves no more in the fate of the mother city. But India and Burma are likely to feel that a tie still binds them to Great Britain, even if it has become much looser. Canada, Australia and the other dominions are linked to the mother country only in name, yet this shadowy but voluntary connection is a more powerful bond than a union enforced by soldiers.

By the calendar, if not by the weather, spring is not far ahead. The panting you hear comes from the aged cars which are giving thanks.

An unfortunate campaigner once promised two cars in every garage. One, if a new one, now seems the height of luxury.

Russia disclaims expansionism, but gosh, how she hollers if anybody questions her right to anything she wants.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, March 8—The Moscow conference of foreign ministers opening Monday is expected to follow the usual routine. After six weeks of torrent haranguing, the big four will agree on nothing and designate their deputies to determine what form nothing shall take. Announcement will be made agreement has been reached on fundamentals, but fundamentally the agreement will concern only superficialities. This is what officials think.

In all other particulars, the meeting approximates one which might be held in an icehouse in Antarctica before the Spring thaw. Mr. Byrnes, the former state secretary, had advised Russia he would take a delegation of 60 but General Marshall decided, when he came into office, he would need 100. Russia was advised of this. But Marshall's final list was chopped 16 to a total of 84, presumably on the urgings of Russia, and our ambassador there, Bedell Smith, who constantly prodded Marshall about hotel accommodations being unavailable. While Russia is quite willing and planning to take over management of the entire world, she had not been able to produce in 30 years of revolution enough hotel rooms in her own capital to house a respectably sized council of ministers.

The newspaper predicament was equally revealing. The press arrangers here had been told repeatedly that after Moscow swept out its two hotels, and gave one of its colossal structures to the press, it could not house many. The arrangers cut the press list to 52, and conceded themselves to be quite slick in their slashing. For one thing they put the New York Daily Worker No. 35 on the list, believing Moscow would never keep its own paper out, and thus we would get at least 35 correspondents in. We got only 15 to 20 according to late accounts, later changed by Ambassador Smith to exactly 36. The accounts are not trustworthy because Moscow was supposed to furnish visas for a press delegation of surely 20 and told us so, but when some of the men applied for their visas at the Russian embassy, nothing had been heard of the matter. State department authorities confessed a few days before Marshall left they did not know how many of our men would get in.

And mind you the press delegation did not only include reporters but one still cameraman who was to take all pictures as a pool man for all the outside world, a movie man who could not get along without an accompanying engineer although his product was similarly to be pooled, and two radio men to supplement some American radio representatives now there. The remaining reporters were not to be UN or Washington experts, but mostly British, French and other representatives of American newspapers already on the job in Europe.

Never in all history of major international conferring has there been such a conference. The Russians would not answer inquiries. Promised visas would not show up as promised, needed delegates and good reporters alike were kept out. To a large extent, we went into the meeting flying blind on one motor.

Now there was just a little too much of all this to allow anyone to expect great things in Moscow, especially in view of semi-official subterranean reports to the contrary. One such recent report, not viewed outside the few top officials, has said Russia is absolutely convinced collapses will come in Britain and the United States within the next 18 months and will follow an undeviating policy against any agreements. DIET AND HEALTH

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THE mother of a premature baby is always anxious to know what chance her child has to live and whether it can grow into a normal, healthy baby if it does. These are things which cannot always be told her at once because certain abnormal conditions may be present which will only show up later on. By and large, however, the most important factor in determining whether a premature baby will survive is its birth weight. This, together with the type of care the baby gets during the first few months of life, and especially the first few days, usually tells the story.

Other Things Important

Other things too, in particular cases, may turn the scale toward life or death. Thus, the nearer the baby is to full term, the better its chance for life. The absence of disease, particularly in the mother, and an uncomplicated birth are also important.

haled smoke through her nostrils in a dissolving cloud.

"But—Steve expects us. Mother told him definitely we'd be there. It's all settled."

"Not any more it isn't," Val corrected calmly. "It all began to fall apart an hour ago. Wade phoned—I'm having dinner with him." She smiled faintly. "You wouldn't expect me to pass Wade up for a weekend at Steve's stupid old place, would you?"

"But Mother and I—" Sherry began, her candid young face bleak with disappointment.

"Mother," Val broke in, "phoned from the store just a little while ago. She thinks the weather's too foul to chase away out to Brundage—especially since it happens Roger Bedloe's invited her to dinner. So, she simply phoned Steve and explained we couldn't make it this weekend."

"Damn it!" Sherry said bitterly. "We haven't gone out to the farm in months! Something like this always comes up. I can't think when I've seen Steve. I've been looking forward all week—and now—"

Absurdly, she felt like crying. Only, of course, she didn't cry—not with Val sitting there regarding her with that look of amused superiority. Sometimes Sherry came close to disliking her sister—and sometimes she felt dreadfully sorry for her. It was only necessary to remember how Val had changed in the past year, to remind oneself that she didn't mind hurling others because she had been so grievously hurt herself. Heartbreak wears many faces.

Val masked hers with arrogant detachment, while she ran pell-mell after pleasure. But all the time, Sherry knew, she was wound up inside like a tight spring and despair walked with her. There was no calm within her, nor even the beginnings of peace. She was driven and harried by the past, by the memory of a laughing face under a shock of unruly blond hair—Rick Colby's face. Rick, whose epitaph was a War Department telegram breaking the news that he was missing in action. Only gaiety gave Val moments of forgetfulness. And there were so many other moments, times when she was moody and bitter, stinging sarcasm—times when Sherry heard her weeping in the night, or woke to see her standing, still as a statue in the moonlight, staring out the window at nothing.

"There'll be other weekends," Val said casually. "You can get a date for tonight. Joel Pemberton is always more than willing—" "I don't want a date with Joel," Val shrugged. "What you see in that dull old place of Steve's anyway?" She left it at that and reached out to turn on the radio.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, March 8

MOST propitious auguries await those whose past efforts, meritorious work, fidelity and loyalty in regard to duty, responsibility and obligations, may feel justified to make the occasion one of festivity and celebration, with all manner of social, domestic and romantic diversions and indulgences. In the latter it might be wise to keep within bounds, since excess of any kind might precipitate disagreeable situations.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a happy, productive and prosperous year, with much in the way of recognition of merit, hard work, efficiency and a sense of duty, responsibilities and obligations, coming up for solid rewards and tokens of esteem and appreciation. Such may take the form of promotion, financial increase, and social, professional and romantic activities, with celebrations and varieties of engagements. It is possible that some sort of irregularity, excess or subtle connection might beget regrets or cast opprobrium on a fair reputation. Shun all possibilities of illicit or scandalous denouements.

A child born on this day is bounteously equipped for a successful and happy career, with distinction, honors and rewards of merit. It might be easily duped by tricksters or strange intrigues.

For Sunday, March 9

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds omen of a sudden and spectacular visitation coming "from the blue" with breath-taking and drastic force, at once uprooting, radical, and devastating. It is impossible to tell the nature of this "atomic bomb" since it affects with revolutionary force the personal, romantic and business life. While this spading up is disintegrating, it is not without its compensations, since the smash may make way for rebuilding on firmer, more wholesome and acceptable foundations. Work to this end.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of a dramatic, unprecedented and unpredictable course of events, in which all the fastness of life—personal, social, romantic, financial and business—are under prospect of a complete and devastating uprooting. Radical and drastic relations, ties and interests are involved and with sensational denouement. But simultaneously there is spectacular advantage to be grasped by a brilliant coup or exceptional opportunities for rebuilding on the ruins a firm, improved and progressive structure, a dramatic, honorable and adventurous career. Look for publicity or public acclaim or emoluments, romantic adventure.

A child born on this day will have a group of original or unique talents and abilities, with ideas and inspiration fitting it for a romantic and adventurous

'Iris' Is Subject For Pickaway Garden Club

Mrs. King Speaker At Meeting Of Group

Mrs. Orion King, program chairman of district 9 of the Ohio Association of Garden Clubs, was guest speaker when Pickaway Garden club members met for their March session in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie D. May, East Franklin street.

Mrs. King used for her subject "Iris". For many years she has made a study of the culture of iris, and her garden contains many species of this interesting flower. Her talk outlined the facts about the early history of this plant, dating back to the time of the early Greek legends in regard to the part that iris played in the rituals of the gods and goddesses of that age.

MRS. KING told of the Mohammedans carrying the Florentine iris as they traveled over Northern Africa. The flower was revered by the early Christians and became known as the flower of thanks. Commonly called the poor man's orchid, it has become a favorite of all flower lovers, because it is so easy to grow. Some of the better known varieties are Siberian and Japanese iris. Japanese iris has become one of the wonders of the flower world. It is best grown by a lake or stream and is noted for its adaptability for scenic display. She also told of all the common varieties grown in this locality, and advised gardeners to buy carefully and to guard against the iris borer and root rot which infests the plant in many localities. At the close of her talk Mrs. King presented color prints of many of the various types of iris.

Mrs. Blanche Y. Mutschman, president of the club, presided during the business meeting which preceded the program. Reports of the preceding meeting were read by Mrs. George H. Bentley, and Mrs. C. P. Heiskell gave the treasurer's report. A letter was read by the president, from the Business and Professional Woman's club, announcing the presentation of the Spring concert of the Portsmouth Male chorus, to be held in the Circleville high school auditorium, March 25. An announcement was made by the president, that the officers of the club and committee chairmen will assist the civic committee on the club project for the coming year. This calls for the beautification of Ted Lewis park and the War memorial.

MRS. TURNEY Pontius, vice-president, and Mrs. John Mast, were appointed to attend the meeting in Fayette county of the Marilee garden club, located at Good Hope on March 26, representing the Pickaway garden club. Action was taken to postpone the meeting date of the April meeting to April 11, the original date falls on Good Friday.

Mrs. Turney Pontius was awarded a prize for her entry in the display of Spring flowers. April meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. A. J. Lyle, West Mound street, and will be a covered-dish dinner. Mrs. Ward Robinson will review the book, entitled "George Washington Carver, Plant Scientist". As an added feature a Spring millinery flower show will be held. Prizes for the funniest, the most interesting, and the most beautifully flower-trimmed hat will be given.

FOLLOWING the evening's program the social committee served refreshments. Mrs. May was assisted by Mrs. Emmett Barnhart, Mrs. James Carpenter, Mrs. O. C. King, Mrs. Clarence Wolf and Mrs. Luther Bower. St. Patrick's day decorations were used in the color

Elliotts Hosts To Gleaners Class

Gleaners class members of Pontius Evangelical United Brethren church met Friday evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Elliott, Washington township. Mrs. Larry Goodman, president, was in charge of the business meeting, and presented the Scripture lesson. Miss Ethel Brobst, teacher of the class, offered a prayer. Fourteen members answered roll call, by repeating their favorite Scripture verse. Guy Stockman gave the Bible study.

Class members decided to serve a chicken dinner at the live stock sale, Circleville, on Wednesday, March 12. Evening's program was directed by Mrs. Harold Thompson and James Lovett and consisted of contests and games. Vocal solo was presented by Pauline Elliott. At the close of the session the hosts served refreshments.

OSU TRACKMEN LEAD; ILLINI SLATED TO WIN

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., March 8 —Illinois' well-balanced squad is expected to spread-eagle the field tonight when finals of the Western Conference indoor track championship will be held.

Ohio State led last night's trials with 13 qualifiers to 10 for Illinois.

The Illini produced one record breaker last night in Herb McKenley in the quarter mile preliminaries. But McKenley shared meet record honors with Paul Miller of Purdue, who set a new mark in the broad jump.

McKenley's 48 heat in the 440-yard preliminaries broke by one tenth of a second Robert Ufer's 1941 standard for both the Big Nine indoor and the American indoor records.

Miller's broad jump of 24 feet, 5 1/2 inches broke the conference indoor mark of 24 feet, 2 1/2 inches established by Lloyd Labeach of Wisconsin last year.

OSU TRACKMEN LEAD; ILLINI SLATED TO WIN

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., March 8.—Illinois' well-balanced squad is expected to spread-eagle the field tonight when finals of the Western Conference indoor track championship will be held.

Ohio State led last night's trials with 13 qualifiers to 10 for Illinois.

The Illini produced one record breaker last night in Herb McKenley in the quarter mile preliminaries. But McKenley shared meet record honors with Paul Miller of Purdue, who set a new mark in the broad jump.

McKenley's 48 heat in the 440-yard preliminaries broke by one tenth of a second Robert Ufer's 1941 standard for both the Big Nine indoor and the American indoor records.

Miller's broad jump of 24 feet, 5 1/2 inches broke the conference indoor mark of 24 feet, 2 1/2 inches established by Lloyd Labeach of Wisconsin last year.

FIND ONE MORE CHANCE
PERFECT PLAY for a close contract consists of finding as many different chances to make it as you can. One method of play may make its entire fate on a single fortuitous circumstance. Another may afford you two possibilities to succeed. A third procedure may extend three opportunities to build the needed trick. Now, some one of those should work. But maybe they will all fail. However, there might be still a fourth way to try. If you can employ that while still preserving the other tries, your play is of the best. Otherwise it is not.

West led the spade 5. South, none too good a card reader, reckoned that fourth-best might be from the K-Q, so came in with the J. The K won and the 4 was returned to the 10, then the 3 knocked out the A. South had reckoned he had three chances left for the ninth trick not in sight, and had planned to try for them all.

He scored the diamond A and Q, next the spade A and K and gave up a spade, hoping the suit would break. It didn't, so East got two spade tricks. The club J was returned to the K and South tried his second chance, a lead to the diamond K, hoping that suit would break, setting up the 6. It didn't, so he led to the club A, hoping the K might drop, setting up the 10. It didn't, so he had to lose a club for the setting trick.

He had one more chance, right at the start, which he fumbled. With the heart 5 as a fourth-best, West was bound to have two cards from among the K, Q and 10. If he had the 10, which was more likely than the K-Q, play of the 6 from dummy would have forced the K or Q and established a winning finesse for the J over the remaining one of those honors. That sounder play could have been tried without sacrificing any of the other three chances, and would have developed the ninth trick required in addition to the eight which were sure.

Your Week-End Question
If you are able to make a certain contract-setting lead against an opponent's suit slam bid, under what circumstances should you refrain from doubling it?

Coming Broadway musical, "The Little Show," is working on a musical for friend husband, who is Happy Felton, the 310-pound "Pot o' Gold" comedian-emcee.

Sammy Kaye and his "Sunday Serenade" troupe, will fill a six-week Summer engagement at the Hotel Astor roof in New York, starting in July.

Adolph Deutsch, maestro of "This Is Hollywood," who also wrote the original score for "Ramrod," is doing the film's theme music in a special descriptive suite for full orchestra.

in the "psychological mood." It's not a whodunit, says CBS; the cops don't catch the criminal... he always outsmarts himself.

If you want two hours and 45 minutes of Hollywood celebrities, ABC's got it for Thursday, March 13, 11:45 p. m. est. The network will broadcast the entire doings of the oscar award festivities in the film capital.

Remember the seven little Foyes of the days of glorious vaudeville? Twenty-six years ago, the family broke up the act. Bryan is a movie mogul now; Charlie owns a Hollywood night club; Irving and Richard are theater managers in the southwest; Madeline and Mary are busily married; and only Eddie Jr. strayed little from the path of comedy in the past 26 years. He's joke provoker on the Thursday night music hall (NBC, 9:00 p. m. est). March 20, the other six little Foyes will join him in a radio reunion.

Incidentally, the KMH quartet, the Mills brothers, are really three brothers and pop. When John Jr., died 11 years ago, John Sr., left his barber shop and joined the boys. "Your Hit Parade" (Saturdays CBS, 9: p. m. est) gets new station identification on April 26. The weekly musical changes to NBC. It will be heard at the same time but in a half hour instead of a 45-minute program... 9 to 9:30 p. m. est.

A New York congressman, Rep. Jacob Javits, has purchased time on a local station to broadcast a twice-a-month program. It's probably, says Variety, the first time a legislator has bought time for other than political purposes. He'll talk about goings-on in congress and incidentally let the home folks know he's still around.

Maestro Vaughn Monroe, who will soon conclude his Hollywood Palladium engagement, will next embark on a tour of midwestern theaters with his Saturday night musical-variety show emanating from the city in which he is appearing.

Abbott and Costello, the clowns, arrive in London July 2. They'll be abroad four weeks, their stay being limited because of picture commitments here.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

FIND ONE MORE CHANCE
PERFECT PLAY for a close contract consists of finding as many different chances to make it as you can. One method of play may stake its entire fate on a single fortuitous circumstance. Another may afford you two possibilities to succeed. A third procedure may extend three opportunities to build the needed trick. Now, some one of those should work. But maybe they will all fail. However, there might be still a fourth way to try. If you can employ that while still preserving the other tries, your play is of the best. Otherwise it is not.

AK 7 4	Q 10 9 5
A J 6	K 4 2
A Q 7	10 8 4 3
AK 3	J 2
Q 10 7 5	N
3	W
J 9	E
Q 9 7 6	S
A 8 3 2
K 6 5 2
10 8 5 4

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South West North East
Pass Pass 2 Pass
2 NT Pass 3 NT
West led the spade 5. South, none too good a card reader, reckoned that fourth-best might be from the K-Q, so came in with the J. The K won and the 4 was returned to the 10, then the 3 knocked out the A. South had reckoned he had three chances left for the ninth trick not in sight, and had planned to try for them all.

He scored the diamond A and Q, next the spade A and K and gave up a spade, hoping the suit would break. It didn't, so East got two spade tricks. The club J was returned to the K and South tried his second chance, a lead to the diamond K, hoping that suit would break, setting up the 6. It didn't, so he led to the club A, hoping the Q might drop, setting up the 10. It didn't, so he had to lose a club for the setting trick.

He had one more chance, right at the start, which he fumbled. With the heart 5 as a fourth-best, West was bound to have two cards from among the K, Q and 10. If he had the 10, which was more likely than the K-Q, play of the 6 from dummy would have forced the K or Q and established a winning finesse for the J over the remaining one of those honors. That sounder play could have been tried without sacrificing any of the other three chances, and would have developed the ninth trick required in addition to the eight which were sure.

Your Week-End Question
If you are able to make a certain contract-setting lead against an opponent's suit slam bid, under what circumstances should you refrain from doubling it?

coming Broadway musical, "The Little Show," is working on a musical for friend husband, who is Happy Felton, the 310-pound "Pot o' Gold" comedian-emcee.

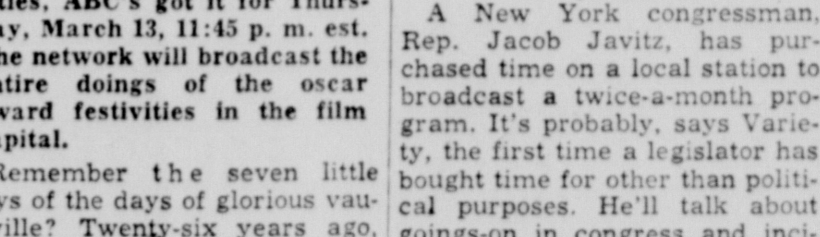

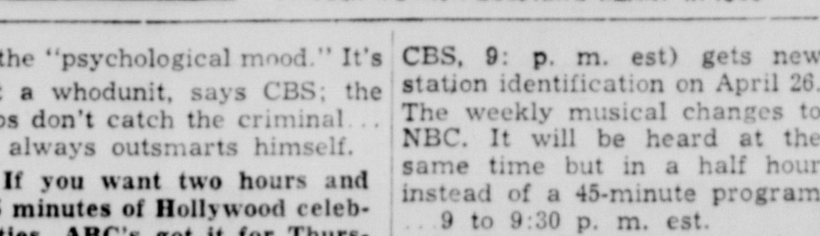

Sammy Kaye and his "Sunday Serenade" troupe, will fill a six-week Summer engagement at the Hotel Astor roof in New York, starting in July.

Adolph Deutsch, maestro of "This Is Hollywood," who also wrote the original score for "Ramrod," is doing the film's theme music in a special descriptive suite for full orchestra.

in the "psychological mood." It's not a whodunit, says CBS; the cops don't catch the criminal... he always outsmarts himself.

If you want two hours and 45 minutes of Hollywood celebrities, ABC's got it for Thursday, March 13, 11:45 p. m. est. The network will broadcast the entire doings of the oscar award festivities in the film capital.

Remember the seven little Foyes of the days of glorious vaudeville? Twenty-six years ago, the family broke up the act. Bryan is a movie mogul now; Charlie owns a Hollywood night club; Irving and Richard are theater managers in the southwest; Madeline and Mary are busily married; and only Eddie Jr. strayed little from the path of comedy in the past 26 years. He's joke provoker on the Thursday night music hall (NBC, 9:00 p. m. est). March 20, the other six little Foyes will join him in a radio reunion.

"Your Hit Parade" (Saturdays

CBS, 9: p. m. est) gets new station identification on April 28. The weekly musical changes to NBC. It will be heard at the same time but in a half hour instead of a 45-minute program 9 to 9:30 p. m. est.

A New York congressman, Rep. Jacob Javits, has purchased time on a local station to broadcast a twice-a-month program. It's probably, says Variety, the first time a legislator has bought time for other than political purposes. He'll talk about goings-on in congress and incidentally let the home folks know he's still around.

Maestro Vaughn Monroe, who will soon conclude his Hollywood Palladium engagement, will next embark on a tour of midwestern theaters with his Saturday night musical-variety show emanating from the city in which he is appearing.

Abbott and Costello, the clowns, arrive in London July 2. They'll be abroad four weeks, their stay being limited because of picture commitments here.
